

JOSEPH A. MARCANO-ESTEVEZ

ASSOCIATE / WASHINGTON, D.C. METRO OFFICE

Joseph provides clients with turnkey, real world solutions to the challenges they face in bringing their concepts and creations to life. As a leading intellectual property attorney, he seeks practical protections and safeguards that enable inventions to succeed in the marketplace.

Joseph's practice at Harness IP focuses on assisting with matters regarding the prosecution and protection of patents, and trademarks. He is well-versed in IP issues affecting a variety of industries, including energy production and delivery, pharmaceutical, and biotechnology.

Joseph is particularly interested in legal matters that exist at the intersection of law, engineering, and business. He grasps the unique position of IP law to create and protect economic opportunity not only for inventors and engineers, but for the individuals and communities they support and employ as well.

BACKGROUND

A problem solver by nature, Joseph began his career working as an electrical engineer. He has helped develop and deploy advanced energy systems through his native Puerto Rico. These systems have brought greater power stability, as well as redundancy, to the island's citizens and businesses. He understands first-hand the challenges entrepreneurs face in terms of resources and time when creating and deploying solutions.
